PRESSIA AND AUSTRIA. Punch describes the difficulty between Austria and Prussia in these stanzas:-

Prussia was a robber, Austria was a thief Prussia and Austria Stole a Danish fief.

Prussia said to Austria. "Leave the swag alone."
Austria said to Prussia, When you drop your bone."

Prussia said to Austria. 'You don't mean to go?" Austria said to Prussia "Out of Holstein? No."

Prussia said to Austria. "Wherefore do you arm?" Austria said to Prussia, t "Of you in alarm."

Prussia said to Austria, "I don't mean to fight."
Austria said to Prussia, 'My intention, quite."

Prussia said to Austria, "Drop your warlike game."
Austria said to Prussia, "When you do the same." Prussia said to Austria,

What's the end to be ?"

Anetria said to Prussia, "Hit me, and you'll see." Prussia said to Austria, 'Come, this brag won't do. Austria sa d to Prussia,

"Sir, the same to you. Prussia said to Austria. "I'll the Diet try." Austria said to Prussia Thank you, so will i."

The opening soirce of the series was lately given to a large and very brilliant company. Eu enie were a rose-colored dress, a coiffure of the same color, and had out few orna

-An odd story is told of a crack young barrister in London, lately a Member of Parliament, who was recently about to be married to a young lady of dis tinguished connections. It seems that the prospective bride was possessed, among other degrable qualifica-tions, of a very noted name, of a neat little fortune of £3000 a year, and was, moreover, the nicce of a distinguished peer. Great preparations were made to have the wedding in the most splendid and recherche manner possible A certain nobleman of high rank was to give a way the brice, and the great Tory chief, Disraeli, was to propose the health of the pair at the wedding breaktast. All the ton were looking abxiously forward to it as promising to be one of the most brilliant affairs of the season. But, not long before the happy day, when the upper circles were before the happy day, when the upper circles were all agog with the coming event, the bridegroom suddenly disappeared. Very soon it leaked out that he had involuntarily become an inmate of the debtors' prison. It was malicously suggested by some that he had got a friend to put him in to escape the match, owing to the discovery that the lady's fortune was not as large as had been supposed.

Love-Disappointment-Death.

St. Louis, May 16.-B. L. Seago, one of the business managers of the Atlanta New Era, a young man of great promise and brilliant intellect committed suicide Saturda, just, in this city. The Democrat of this morning gives the following account:—About a week ago. B. L. Seago, assistant editor of the Atlanta Era, arrived in this city, and took a room in the fif h story of the Southern Hotel. He appeared only a melanchory and had but https:// appeared quite melancholy, and had but little to say to any one about the hotel. ounce of morphine and three prescriptions composed of morphine and chloroform. The last seen or him was on Friday night. At two o'clock Sunday, his room was entered through the transom, and his dead body found lying on the bed. Coroner O'Reiley was summoned, and an inquest was held.

Several letters written by the deceased a short time before his death were found on the table, showing that he had taken his own life. No money was found among his effects, nor had he deposited any at the office of the notel. He was about thirty years of age. The following are copies of the letters written in pencil, the last being almost diegible:— TO A. K. SEAGO, OF ATLANTA.

Straws.

If straws show the direction of the wind, the utterances of crowned heads in Europe, just now, are significant. Among the bits of gossip in the foreign mail received by the Java, we and the following:—

"At a soirce dansante given at the Tuileries, while M. de Goltz and Prince Metternich were talking confidentially together in the recess of one of the windows, Napoleon, perceiving the intimate nature of the conversation, went towards the speakers, and said in a tone loud enough to be heard by those standing near: 'An, Prussia and Austria, thus do I love to see you

Some of the Italian journals state that after a bail lately given to the King of Italy by the city of Milan, he said to the members of the municipal said to the said to the municipal said to the municipal said to the municipal said to the municipal said to the said to the municipal said to the munici pality: 'Gertlemen, you have given me s ball at Milan; next year I will return the compliment by giving you a supper at Venice.'
"The Pall Mall Gazette has the following:

'The Parisian public is just now so excited, and so many wild rumors are constantly circulating there, that it is not easy to sift the truth from the exaggerations and inventions which prevail. We hear, however, from a correspondent, that Mcnouti Garibaldi was, in the beginning of the week, in Paris, making large purchases of equip-ments, and also offering immediate engagements to various officers who formerly served under ANECDOTE OF JOHN KEBLE.—A correspondent of an English journalitells the following story of the late John Kebie;—"In the only visit I ever paid to that second Bemerton (Hursley), in 1863, as we were walking towards the village, I directed Mr. Keble's attention to a broken piece of ground-a chalk-pit, as it turned out-which caught my eye on our left. 'Ah!' he said, 'that is a sad place—that is connected with the most painful event of my life.' I began to fear that t had been the scene of some terrible accident. which I had unwittingly recalled to his mind. 'It was there,' he went on, 'that I first knew for certain that J. H. N. had left us. We had just made up our minds that such an event was all but inevitable, and one day I received a letter in his handwriting. I jelt sure of what it contained, and I carried it about with me all through the day, straid to open it. At last I got away to that chalk-pit, and there, forcing myself to read the letter, I found that my forebodings had been too true-it was the announcement that he was gone."

AN ACTRESS CULTIVATING OYSTERS. - Soon after the death of the celebrated Rachel (says the Pall Mall Gazette), her sister, Sarah Felix, abandoned the stage and belook herself to oys-ter breeding on the shores of Mount St. Michael's bay, in Lower Normandy, where for some years past she has successfully directed an extensive parc aux hudres. But the oyster pest by which the Cancale district has been attacked has de-populated her beds, and she is now forced to make fresh exertions in order to obtain a livelihood. So she has obtained from the Prefect of La Manche the concession of a fresh bed known as Le Banc des Pendus, near Regneville, on which she proposes to acclimatize the American oyster, a delicacy hitherto unknown to Europeon gastronomy.

EMIGRATION FROM IRELAND IN 1865.-From a statistical report just issued under the authority of the Irish Registrar-General, it appears that the emigration from Ireland during the year 1865 was 101,497, rather a less number that in 1864. A great increase, however, took place during the last three months of 1865 as compared with 1864, and this increase has extended into the present year. The Registrar's returns are produced in a very leisurely manner, and in April, 1866, we have only the figures for the quarter ending December, 1865, but it is understood that the emigration for the past three months has been at the rate of 14,000 per month. It is estimated that the Irish population de-creased further last year to the number of 50,000, which would leave the total about 5,600,000.

THE ARIZONA MASSACRE,-A letter signed by Charles Hamilton, and dated at William's Fork, Arizona, April 30, seems to confirm the massacre at Fort Goodwin. He states that the attack occurred ten days previously, and that of two companies of regulars, third battalion, 14th Regiment, consisting of one hundred men, only seven escaped. The remainder were wounded and scalped. The Apaches reaped a rich harvest, carrying of arms, ammunition, commissary stores, etc. A number of supposed friendly Indians were admitted into the fort, and surprised the garrison. On the contrary, despatches received in San Francisco from General Mason say that the report of the massacre is without
